Microsoft has announced the end-of-servicing plan for third-party printer drivers on Windows.

Microsoft Windows now offers inbox support for Mopria-compliant print devices via the Microsoft IPP Class Driver, removing the need for print device manufacturers to provide print drivers.

With these advancements in the Windows Print Platform, Microsoft is announcing the end of servicing for legacy Windows printer drivers based on the initial timeline shared below:

2025	No new printer drivers will be published to Windows update		2026	Windows behavior will be modified to prefer the Windows IPP inbox class driver
2027	Third-party printer driver updates will no longer be allowed (except for security-related fixes)
